

INTERVIEW PREPARATION SCRIPT

Prepared for: Allysa Joy C. Billiones

Target Role: Chatting & Insights Engagement Specialist

This preparation script is customized to blend your Bachelor of Science in Marketing Management background with the specific nuance, empathy, and active communication style required for high-insight text interaction and peer/client counseling roles.

Part 1: The Introduction & Background

Interviewer: "Tell me about yourself and why you are interested in this role."

Your Response:

"Hi, I'm Allysa Joy Billiones. I graduated with a Bachelor of Science in Marketing Management. While my formal background is in marketing, what I am truly passionate about is deep human connection and purposeful communication. Marketing taught me how to deeply understand people's core needs, practice active listening, and communicate with deliberate empathy and insight.

I am highly drawn to this chatter role because it allows me to use those exact skills in a meaningful, one-on-one setting. I excel at text-based communication, reading between the lines of a message, and providing thoughtful, engaging responses. My goal is to act as a reliable, insightful voice for the individuals we serve, ensuring they feel completely heard, validated, and supported at every turn."

Part 2: Core Chatting & Insight Competency

Interviewer: "This job requires a lot of typing and maintaining a specific tone. How do you ensure your chat messages feel genuine and deeply insightful?"

Your Response:

"In marketing management, we learn that individuals can immediately spot when a message is automated, generic, or insincere. The exact same principle applies to empathetic chatting. To ensure my messages remain authentic, I strictly avoid generic, copy-pasted responses.

Instead, I practice reflective listening—mirroring the emotional state of the person on the other end so they know I am fully present. If they are stressed, my written tone becomes calm and stabilizing. If they are seeking deeper guidance, I look past surface-level details to offer a fresh perspective that helps them reframe their situation. My goal is always to ensure they feel like they are interacting with a real, compassionate human who genuinely cares about their journey."

Part 3: Behavioral Scenarios & Counseling Framework

When handled scenario-based questions regarding counseling, comfort, or guidance, utilize the L.A.T.E. Framework:

- Listen (Read Deeply): Analyze the text for underlying emotional states or unspoken anxieties.
- Validate: Acknowledge their emotional experience immediately so they feel safe and understood.
- Think (Formulate Insight): Reframe their dilemma using high-level perspective rather than basic advice.
- Engage: Invite collaborative problem solving with an open-ended, low-pressure closing query.

Scenario 1: Someone is venting about a massive disappointment or emotional setback.

Your Response:

"I understand how incredibly frustrating and exhausting this must be for you right now. It completely makes sense that you feel this way after putting so much heart and effort into it. When things don't go as planned, it is deeply painful. But remember, this single setback does not define your capabilities or your entire journey. Take a slow, deep breath—we can figure out the next step together whenever you feel ready."

Scenario 2: A user feels lost, ungrounded, or requests deep structural direction.

Your Response:

"It is completely okay to feel lost right now; sometimes, feeling stuck is just a natural sign that you are outgrowing your current situation and evolving. Instead of trying to figure out the whole map all at once, what is just one small thing you can do today that brings you immediate peace? I am right here to brainstorm and talk it through with you step-by-step."

Part 4: Strategic Closings & Strategic Questions

Interviewer: "Do you have any questions for us?"

Always ask insightful questions to show your analytical marketing mindset and dedication:

- "What does an exceptionally successful day look like for a specialist in this chatting role, and what specific engagement metrics matter most to your team?"
- "Are there specific brand guidelines, tonal frameworks, or communication philosophies that I should study ahead of time to better align with the insights your team provides?"
